

NATIONAL CAMPUS FIRE SAFETY MONTH 2009

National Campus Fire Safety Month is a month-long event in September to encourage schools across the nation to raise awareness among their students on fire safety issues. First started in 2005 by a group of parents who had lost children in campus fires and fire safety advocates, it has grown to include proclamations being issued by governors, resolutions being passed in Congress and a national launch being held on Capitol Hill. In addition, a comparable launch was held on the same day in the United Kingdom.

In 2008, the launch was held on Capitol Hill for the first time and was a resounding success. It brought together students from the University of North Carolina and the University of South Carolina, parents, fire officials, advocates and others for a full day that included a press conference with five Members of Congress followed by meetings with Congressional staffers. The students said that this was clearly one of the most memorable experiences of their college year and many are coming back again for 2009.

If you or your school or organization is interested in taking part, please review the information in this handout. If you have any questions, or if you want to participate, then contact Ed Comeau at ecomeau@campus-firewatch.com or 413-323-6002.
